"Yimmie Yonson's Yob" Pleases Large Crowd

On December 1st, sponsored by Avondale U.F.W.A., "Yimmie Yonson's Yob" was played at Carron's hall to a crowded house. The players, under the able management of Mrs. S. Thomson and Miss C. Leslie, showed good training. Each character played their role showing their splendid ability to handle their part (though all those taking part were amateurs). The applause and laughter during the humorous parts and the quietness to the extent of hearing a pin drop when a sad period came on showed well the audience were getting their money's worth. Mr. Kent, a farmer and stern father, was played by Mr. Feidler and showed how even the sternest father can apologize when he finds he is in the wrong.

Mrs. Kent (his wife) played by Mrs. Feidler, showed such devotion and steadfastness in the most sad and trying circumstances.

Belle, the adopted daughter, played by Miss Phyllis Tyndall, in her quiet and devoted attitude to the foster parents won the hearts of the audience.

Sylvia, Mr. Kent's niece, played by Miss Marylyllis Rogers was one of the hardest parts to play, she being a snobbish and deceitful girl making a great deal of trouble and heartache for all the family; this part was doubly hard as Miss Rogers' disposition is definitely opposite to the part she played. Frank, a crook, who came to the Kent home, won Sylvia's love and endeavoring to steal Mr. Kent's money by her help, was played by Mr. Geo. Tyndall and was well done; turning out in the end to be an escaped convict and caught by Pal, a detective, played by Mr. Jack Ballentine, who did some real detective work with the aid of Kitty, a little helper who fell in love with Pal.

Peg, an Irish cook, played by Miss Evelyn Rogers; Micky, an Irish farm hand, by Mr. Rudie Feidler, and Kitty, the helper, by Miss Angeline Craig, were a scream.

Last but not least was "Yimmie Yonson," played by Mr. Ferd Feidler, who was so much a real swede in his make-up and dialect, his friends didn't know him. Yimmie, however, turned out to be the son, Bob, of Kent's, who was supposed to be drowned but came back in disguise to clear his name (having been accused of stealing $100 from his father) which he did to the satisfaction of all. After the crook, Frank, was placed safely in jail and all the other difficulties righted, there was a happy reunion of an estranged family and the moral of the play was realized. The audience were very complimentary, voicing their sentiments of it being a splendid evening's entertainment. The ladies of the local U.F.W.A. served a sumptuous lunch of sandwiches, cake and coffee. After, the Williamsons' orchestra, of Fabyan, put the pep into the light fantastic until the "wee sma' hours."

Mrs. B. Haun is leaving the end of the week to visit her mother and brothers at Fort Saskatchewan.

Mr. and Mrs. S. M. New were Sunday visitors at the Dunbar home in Alma Mater district.

Mr and Mrs. S. M. New and Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin are the committee to further the card party on Friday evening, December 8th, at Avonglen school. Everyone is welcome.

J. C. McFarland Holding Big Store-Wide Sale

With Christmas but a short time away, the big store-wide sale which opened today at J. C. McFarland & Co.'s big department store, offers the Yuletide shopper a superb opportunity of obtaining seasonable goods and gifts at prices which are, to say the least, astounding. The massive posters announcing the momentuous event were mailed to every resident of Irma and district Thursday, and a perusal of same will convince one and all that the enterprising Irma firm has excelled their past efforts to cater to thrifty shoppers.

Expense was not considered in promoting the event. Mr. McFarland secured the services of Mr. Thos. Hawkins, and installed him as sales manager. This gentleman has a keen sense of merchandise values and possesses the ability to pare down prices to the satisfaction of both consumer and merchant. Mr. Hawkins has conducted numerous special sales for Western merchants which have gone down in mercantile history as outstanding events.

An invitation is extended to everybody far and near to come and compare the goods plus the prices. The stock is of the McFarland grade which has made their store name a household word.

First President of Irma Ladies' Aid Passes On

Those who remember her so well will be sorry to hear of the death of one of Irma's first settlers in the person of Mrs. Charles Swails, who suffered a severe stroke and passed away without regaining consciousness. Mr. Swails predeceased her a number of years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Swails, with their three sons, came to Irma in the fall of 1908 and built the first general store on the Irma townsite. They were both well known for their kindly dispositions. Strangers always received a hearty welcome at their door, and they both took a keen interest in the church and social life of the community.

Mrs. Swails was elected president of the Ladies' Aid when it was first organized, over twenty years ago.

Sincere sympathy is felt for the two sons, Leland and Edgar, who, with their families, are making their homes in Tacoma, Washington.

SOWING

Do you know what the right or the wrong you do
Will come back of a certain day to you?
You cannot escape the shadows they cast
Over your future—along your past;
Whatever you do sends echoes back
Or across, or forward, along your track.

Sure as the sun shines over the earth
Thoughts, ambitions and love have birth;
And nothing can stay them—results must come;
Once spoken a word can never be dumb;
The flower of love, the deceit of hate,
The value of purity, falsehood's mate,
Whichever you plant will come back to you
For you can't get away from the deeds you do.

Or deeper down in your innocence whole—
And farther back in your sin-stained soul
Farther or deeper, whichever it be—
Intensified character builds, you see;
And your own heart blackens or glows with life,
According to what you put into the strife.

Heavier and Finished Hogs Demand of Export Trade

S. E. Todd, Secretary of The Industrial and Development Council, Has Important Message to Western Farmers

Heavier and finished hogs is strongly emphasized by S. E. Todd, secretary of The Industrial and Development Council of Canadian Meat Packers, with headquarters at Toronto, in an open letter to farmers and all interested in developing our export bacon trade.

Heavier and Finished Hogs

In the 45 weeks of 1933, to the week ending November 9th, hog deliveries have been 2,600,000 compared with 2,571,000 in the same period of 1932. Hog deliveries for the week of November 9th, 1933, were 64,700 compared with 50,300 for the corresponding week of 1932. In the same time the price of bacon hogs has advanced from $3.70 to $6.00 per hundred pounds on the Toronto market. Thus hog deliveries have increased and the domestic price of pork products has considerably advanced.

Along with this condition in pork products beef prices have fallen to low levels and domestic consumption is shifting from pork to beef. This is restricting the domestic outlet for pork. But the Ottawa Conference agreements have provided an assured outlet for bacon. For the nine months to end of September, 1933, bacon exports to Britain were 51,527,000 lbs., compared with 24,685,000 in the same period of 1932. Exports continue to be on a heavy relative scale. Our one hope of maintaining and bettering hog prices is to increase our exports of bacon.

But here's the rub, says Mr. Todd. When in England lately the greatest complaint I heard with regard to Canadian bacon was lack of finish and light weights. Canadian packers in order to not over-burden the domestic market were forced to ship bacon that did not measure up to the desired quality. (There were faults in type and conformation, but that is another story). If the hogs from which the bacon was made had been of the proper weights and finish the bacon situation would have greatly benefited.

It would appear that farmers do not understand the seriousness of this condition. At present it is impossible to get enough properly-finished hogs of the right weights to make the required quantities of export bacon and of the best bacon for home use. A part of these unfinished and light weight hogs may be due to lack of feed but is not a great deal of it due to the fact that producers do not quite understand the importance of proper weights and finish.

This is the Message of this Letter

The bulk of good bacon comes from the bacon and select grades of hogs. There is a range of weights in these two grades of from 180 to 230 lbs. at the farm. It is probably natural for farmers to assume that when a hog has attained a weight of 180 lbs. in the bacon grade or 190 in the select grade, that this is as useful a weight for export or domestic purposes as any weight up to 230 lbs.

Such is not the case. The low weights are the minimum and the high weights are the maximum that can be accepted. But it is very desirable that the bulk of the hogs should be either in the low or the high weights. The bulk of the hogs should be from 200 to 220 lbs., at the farm, when not too full of feed.

Hogs are now coming in quantities at from 180 to 200 lbs. At these low weights many are unfinished and even a part of the heavier weights lack finish. This is disastrous to good prices for bacon both in the export and domestic market and, of course, equally disastrous to good prices for hogs.

The difficulty of scarce feed supplies in some sections is fully recognized. But it will pay to finish hogs that are on hand on the farm rather than flood the market with poor hogs. At from 180 to 230 lbs. hogs gain rapidly and make very economical use of feed. Hogs that are finished so as to make bacon or select grade, bring from fifty cents to a dollar per hundred more than unfinished hogs. This will pay for purchased feed. At the same time the market will be strengthened instead of being weakened.

Some weeks ago on account of an extra supply of bacon being permitted to be shipped to the British market by Denmark, the price slumped. Since that time further restrictions of imports have been imposed by Britain on foreign countries and currency exchange has improved. The markets have strengthened in consequence. For the weeks of October 26th, November 2nd and November 9th, the price of bacon hogs at Toronto has been $5.60, $5.75 and $6.00, showing a steady advance.

It is believed that if farmers fully understand the need for carrying their hogs until from 200 to 220 lbs. and having them properly finished, they will co-operate for the good of all, concludes Mr. Todd.

GALLANT SOLDIER AT REST

MONTREAL, Nov. 30.—Funeral of Sir Arthur Currie will be held here at 10.45 a.m., Tuesday, according to an announcement at McGill University where the famous military commander had been principal and vice-chancellor for the past 13 years.

General Sir Arthur Currie, who led the Canadian corps to victory culminated with the entry into Mons on Armistice Day, 1918, died at 2.50 on Thursday morning last at Royal Victoria Hospital. A gallant fight of three weeks wore to an end when pneumonia developed Sunday. He failed to rally after suffering blockage of a blood vessel in the mid-brain, which caused him to be taken to hospital November 7th.

ARGENTINE SETS WHEAT PRICE

Bueons Aires, Argentinia, Nov. 30.—The Argentine government by decree Wednesday fixed the following prices for grains:

Wheat, 62 cents a bushel; corn, 44 cents a bushel; flax, $1.15 a bushel; (prices in United States currency).

The decree raises grain prices from 11 to16 per cent above the previous level and also creates a grain regulation board to purchase money drafts from exporters and send them to the firms needing foreign exchange by a virtual auction system. The government anticipated that this system would defray expenses of the grain subsidy, leaving the government a net profit.

Those pictures of the football players with their feet shooting up, up, and up (oh yes, one foot at a time), makes one wonder if the camera tells the truth. If those fellows can really kick that high ,there is no need for icicles to remain along the roof. That cleated boot should be able to clear the dangerous things neatly. But we would really like to see an actual kick that would compare with the camera one.

Ask Poll Tax to Pay Hospital Expenses

Placing of a provincial head or poll tax on all persons not paying a municipal tax and seeking employment in this province, was requested in a resolution adopted unanimously by delegates to the annual convention of the Alberta Association of Municipal Districts in session held at Edmonton, recently.

The proceeds of such a tax would be used to take care of indigent sick sent to hospitals, thus relieving municipalities of present financial strain in that respect.

"The idea is that people who seek jobs in this province should pay for sickness in their own ranks," said a delegate. "This has been a heavy burden on our municipality and it will affect others the same way if something is not done."

After brief discussion, the resolution carried without opposition.

The resolution asks legislation to provide for the tax, which would be collected through employers annually.

Receipts would be carried by employes at all times and would be produced when seeking employment. Should a receipt holder be a taxpayer in a different municipality from the one in which he seeks employment, the tax would be refunded and charged back to the government.

The delegates adopted a resolution from Vermilion constituency which protested against the placing of settlers upon land in municipalities, excepting those who were in a position to support themselves. Also, it urged that the results of due inquiry to this end be first furnished the government or municipalities before permission was given to settle on the land. The government should take action to protect municipalities against settlement of the kind objected to, it was contended.

The delegates had a long discussion over the resolution asking that the provincial and dominion governments be requested to assume all responsibility for maintenance of any families moved into municipal districts under the family settlement scheme or moved from dried-out areas under free freight plan.

Another resolution that was passed by the convention asked that the various hospital boards be empowered to grant a discount to contributing units for prompt payment of requisitions, and that penalties be added to any and all sums in default.

The convention also asked that in future when new hospital districts are organized that a qualified engineer be employed to approve the proposed site of the hospital and look into the matter of adequate sewage disposal and supply of good water.

The following resolution was carried but with some dissenting votes: "Resolved that this convention recommend to the government of this province that legislation be brought down giving non-resident ratepayers the right to transfer to their bonafide lease-holder their rights under municipal hospitals act in the same manner that corporations now may do."

Will Inflation Benefit?

One of the many results flowing out of the Great War was the development of a narrow nationalism which found expression in many ways and has had a profound effect upon not only national policies but in forms and methods of government. Out of the Great War grew an economic warfare more intense than in the years that preceded that titanic struggle. That economic war led to the use of tariffs, quotas, and other trade restrictions on a scale hitherto unknown. All nations engaged in it, some reluctantly, but because they were forced into it by the actions of other nations.

As this economic warfare progressed it inevitably led to still another war,—a war of exchange. The value of the currency of one nation rose or fell in relation to the value of the currencies of other nations, and as it rose or fell it directly affected the trade of the nations as well as the whole financial structure of all, and the ability of one group of people to meet its obligations to another group.

From this it was but a short step to a third form of warfare now being waged,—a war of currencies. Some nations,—most of them,—abandoned the gold standard, but a few still adhere to it. Then began the struggle of the currencies. Abandoning the gold standard was a measure of inflation. The next step was the more or less gradual reduction of the value of national currencies in terms of gold, the object being to raise prices which had fallen to a disastrously low ebb. In other words, policies of inflation were embarked upon.

But always in war, no matter the nature of the struggle, one party or country always endeavors to outdo the other. It is so in physical warfare; it is true in any tariff war. It is equally true in a war of inflation. When one country embarks upon a policy of inflation, even though it be primarily as a matter of domestic concern alone, it immediately has repercussions in other countries. So when one country proceeds with a policy of inflation, and persists in it, sooner or later other countries will follow suit, and, in following suit, will, of course, seek to go other countries "one better."

Whatever may be said in favor of a degree of inflation on the one hand, or deflation on the other, to meet changing economic conditions,—and a country engaging in either the one policy or the other always proceeds on the assumption that great care will be exercised, and the policy fully controlled to prevent it getting out of hand,—the net result invariably is that it does get out of control, and the final stage of affairs is made worse rather than improved, and the process of financial recovery made more difficult and of longer duration, with losses made heavier.

A policy of inflation is being applied in the United States at the present time. As always, President Roosevelt is anxious to keep it within bounds, but there are great and powerful influences at work to carry it far beyond what the President desires and has in mind. Can the situation be controlled? When Congress re-assembles, indications are not lacking that great pressure will be applied to put the printing presses to work turning out billions of paper money, in addition to the present inflationary policy of decreasing the gold value of the dollar. And Congress is still supreme in the United States. It conferred very extensive emergency powers upon the President, giving him almost dictatorial powers. But it can withdraw those powers, or it can itself go much farther than the President and his advisers deem it wise to go.

And Canada cannot be indifferent to or prove immune from the effects of United States policy, whatever it may be. Our trade and other relationships are too closely interwoven, and our financial undertakings, both public and private, so entwined that Canada will be directly affected. Whether we like it or not, Canadian policy must, of necessity, be governed to some extent, —possibly a large extent.—by United States policy in this matter.

Inflation and deflation, and their consequences, may be traced throughout the course of history, dating back to the years B.C., and the lessons of history teach us that inflation appears to have generally, if indeed, not always, ended in disaster. There was at first always the intention of control, but the movement usually ended by breaking all bounds. Increased purchasing power through inflation is only temporary; higher prices stimulate overproduction and check consumption; new debts appear, and a return to stability is increasingly difficult.

The depression beginning in 1929 was preceded by wild speculation, encouraged and made possible by an expansion of credit, but encouraged and stimulated by installment selling on a scale never before witnessed. Many were the warnings issued at the time this wholesale expansion of credit, and unprecedented installment buying, was in progress. It could be seen by anyone willing to pause and consider that such installment buying,—all based on credit,—could not go on indefinitely; that a point must be reached when and where millions of individuals committed to installment payments would reach the end of their purchasing power, having used up all their credit and pledged all their resources. The saturation point was reached late in 1929, and the crash followed.

People had bought land, houses, motor cars, radios, equipment of all kinds, and many luxuries all on the promise to pay, weekly, monthly, yearly installments. The time came when they could make no more commitments, so production stopped, and with its stoppage, millions were thrown out of employment and were thus placed in a position where they could not meet their deferred installment payments. Prices fell, and everybody sustained losses.

Inflation might temporarily raise prices, just as speculation and installment buying,—which, after all, was inflation pure and simple,—did raise prices. But one form of inflation can not overcome the evils caused by another form of inflation.

Cause Of Weather Changes

Scientists Find Evidence That Electricity Responsible For Variations

Evidence that electricity controls weather all over the world was announced to the National Academy of Sciences at Cambridge, Mass. The electric control runs in a definite cycle, causing rains, drouths and heat every 23 years, with comparatively minor variations for individual localities. This electric cycle comes from the sun.

"The weather of 1956," said this report, will have the same general pattern—differing, of course, in day by day details—as the weather the world has experienced in 1933.

"Next summer would have the same general weather pattern as the world experienced during the summer of 1911. The discovery marks a long step forward toward the day of long-range forecasting."

Tests Made In Germany Show That It Neither Splinters Nor Breaks

Glass which neither splinters nor breaks has been produced in Germany. In tests made recently three adults used a long narrow sheet as a seesaw. The glass shows an elasticity similar to that of highly flexible steel. A heavy steel ball dropped from a height of 10 feet left no impression. The glass is produced by a special heating process. THREE ILLS ROUTED

Health Tip From Woman Of 67

"For headache—constipation—rheumatism—I use Kruschen. And since I have used it, I am in very much better health. In fact, I hardly ever wake with those bad headaches and that general feeling of lassitude. Kruschen has helped me beyond words. I am 67 and feel young."—thus writes Mrs. M. G.

It is reasonable to ask why it is that headaches, constipation, and rheumatism all yield so completely to Kruschen? What is the secret of Kruschen's effectiveness against these different complaints? The secret is an open one. It is revealed in the analysis on the bottle—for physicians and everyone else to see. Six vital, mineral salts. That is the secret. Each of these six salts has an action of its own. Where one cannot penetrate another can—and does. Stomach, liver, kidneys and digestive tract are all benefited and toned up to a top-notch condition of efficiency.

Belgium Closing Four Prisons

Crime Seems To Have Fallen Off Since War

Crime has fallen off to such an extent in Belgium since the armistice that four of the thirty-one prisons are to be closed. Prison officials attribute this state of affairs to the leniency of the courts and the operation of the first-offenders act. They say also that minors who formerly went to prison now go to the reformatory, which is not listed as a prison.

Favor Was Returned

Chinese Mission Sends Money To Toronto Church For Poor

Toronto church people, accustomed to contributing money to Chinese missions, have a return favor. The Cheng Tu parish of the Church of England in West China, has sent a gift to the Church of the Resurrection in Toronto for the "poor and needy for the parish." The gift, amounting to $35 in Chinese money, was presented by Rev. H. W. K. Mowll, former Bishop of West China and Archbishop-elect of Sydney, Australia. The congregation which packed the little church breathed a prayer of thanksgiving as the Archbishop announced his gift from the Chinese Christians.

Currency Of Albania Is Very Cosmopolitan

Smallest Nation In Balkans Uses Gold Of Other Nations

The tiny kingdom of Albania, smallest in the Balkans, is the only country in that region which still pays its officials in gold, and where one may obtain gold in exchange for paper.

A general gasp of incredulity was noticeable in Sofia the other day, when the Albanian Bishop Vissarion, representing his nation at the international conference for the union of International Friendship through the churches, calmly pulled a fat purse from under his cassock and paid his hotel and other expenses in hard yellow coin.

His Grace explained that Albania, having no national currency of its own, is obliged to pay its officials on the basis of the gold franc. But since that pre-war phenomenon is rare today, English sovereigns, Turkish piastres, Italian lire, and even United States $5 and $10 gold pieces are employed in addition to the old "Napoleons" or "Louis."

Until the United States went off the gold standard, its paper dollar used to be regarded as the most solid currency circulating in the Balkans, and was employed to replace gold as a medium of exchange. Since its drop, however, the Albanians and others have gone back to the precious metal itself.

In all other Balkan countries the governments have confiscated all gold, replacing it by depreciable local paper currency. Heavy penalties are imposed on those found trafficking in gold, or taking foreign exchange out beyond the borders.

Zoologists Are Puzzled

Cannot Identify Strange Water Animal Caught In St. Lawrence

A strange water animal caught on a worm-baited hook in the St. Lawrence River by Jack Thervin of Montreal, is defying all efforts of amateur zoologists to give it a zoological classification.

It is fourteen inches long, has lizard legs, a ruff about its neck, three pairs of lungs worn outside, dull red and orange splotches on its otherwise dark skin and a short tail.

OCCASIONAL WIFE

By EDNA ROBB WEBSTER

Author of "Joretta," "Lipstick Girl" Etc.

SYNOPSIS

Camilla Hoyt, young and beautiful art student, and Peter Anson, a struggling sculptor, fall in love and marry secretly, deciding to live apart until the time Peter can establish himself. Camilla, the adopted daughter of wealthy parents, is not to inherit money when she comes of age. She is preparing herself for life with a course in commercial art, hoping to get a job to enable her to support herself. She has been making the rounds of agencies.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER XIX.

Returning home, Camilla was surprised to discover how tired she was with the day's efforts. Study and classes at school had been peremptory, but there was a vast difference between preparation for work, and work itself, or even obtaining it, she already had discovered. While she dressed for dinner, she reviewed in her mind some of the truths which had made themselves evident to her that day. She always had supposed that if you were willing to work, there was a place for you. It was obvious that not only was that supposition wrong, but that not even if you were capable of doing the work you chose, you were given the opportunity.

Gazing around at the furnishings of the big luxurious rooms that had sheltered her for so long, and making rapid calculations with the values of her possessions, she was astounded at the time she estimated it would require her to earn the money they represented.

Even if she were given the opportunity to work for pay, how long would it take her to earn what the clothes she was putting on had cost her? Her frock was an imported model that had cost three hundred dolairs, her shoes, twenty-five; her stockings and lingerie another seventy-five. Her wardrobe and dressing table drawers were filled with such costly garments.

Of course, she knew that when she earned her own living, she would no longer patronize exclusive shops and wear hand embroidered linger'e. But she wondered how many of the women who wore such garments could earn the money for even very poor substitutes, if they were obliged to. With sudden panic, she wondered if she could.

Sitting before the triple cheval glass of her dressing table, Camilla did not see her glowing beauty. She was gazing into the vast and chaotic abyss that gaped suddenly at her feet—that chasm of life into which she was about to leap. Approaching it, she had been so confident and secure; standing now at the brink and gazing into its abysmal depths, she drew back with horror. Then suddenly, there appeared before her Peter's dear and earnest face, the grave eyes sparkling with that smile she loved, and she reached out and clasped his hand, no longer afraid. She was ready to leap into life—with Peter.

* * * * * * * *

Peter was modelling with intense interest, striving for a new effect before the idea should become lost in the ethereal confusion of escaped inspirations that their originators had failed to capture quickly enough. His hands were gray with plastic clay and his mind was projected into the realm of creative fancy. A knock on the door suddenly interrupted the summer morning stillness and drew him back to reality.

His forehead wrinkled with annoyance, for he had no wish to be disturbed. Then the reminder that it might be Camilla who had come to see him, made him call quickly, "Come in." He always wanted to see Camilla, no matter how disturbing she might be.

There was an instant's hesitation, then the knob turned and the door opened to disclose a strange girl. A very beautiful stranger, she was, so beautiful that Peter stared at her stupidly for a moment. The girl just smiled friendly and said, "May I come in?"

"That is what I told you to do," he said. "Find a chair, please. As you see, I am—er—busy." Somehow, he felt defensive toward her at once, and his voice reflected his attitude.

"Thanks," she said, crossing the room with casual, lissom movements and sinking into the one armchair which graced the room. "You are Peter Anson, aren't you?" she inquired, raising her very blue eyes that were deeply shadowed with long, dark lashes. Their contrast with the pale gold of her hair was startling and effective.

"I can't deny that," Peter replied.

"I'm Sylvia Todd," she offered.

"Miss Todd, how do you do," Peter inclined his head slightly. "What may I do for you?"

"Give me some work," she came to the point quickly. "I'm a model, and desperate for work." She took a cigarette from her purse and fired it with a lighter from the table beside her.

Peter daubed tentatively at the clay figure on the turn stand. "I'm afraid you have come to the wrong place for that."

"You have a model now?"

"No."

"Well, you're a sculptor, aren't you? Two and two make four."

"Exactly. And five and five make ten—that's two days for a model. I can't afford one."

"And where do you expect to get without one?"

"I manage. I did that without one." He indicated the group in the window alcove which he had made for Camilla. Miss Todd glanced at it casually. "Not bad. But neither will that kind of stuff get you anywhere."

"You mean nudes."

"Sure. Symbolic stuff. That's what brings in the dough that makes the cake. And it's my line. Want to see my figure?"

"I noticed it when you walked across the room," diffidently.

She laughed shortly. "You would, of course. Well, how about using it for inspiration, Big Boy? Gee, you're quite an inspiration yourself."

"No doubt you could be that," he smiled for the first time, "but I don't happen to be doing anything that needs it."

"Now is as good a time to begin as any. What about the National exhibit I heard you were going to enter?"

"I planned to."

"With what—that?" she nodded toward the immigrant group.

"Oh, no—that is just a personal possession."

"Well, you wouldn't ever get a look-in with that," she shrugged. "What then?"

"Why, I've had several hunches, but none of them suited me, quite, and I'm not sure now that I want to enter the exhibit."

"Afraid you might lose the scholarship?"

"More afraid I might win, if you will pardon my conceit."

She stared at him in surprise.

"Well, are you crazy, or am I cuckoo?"

"Neither, I hope. It just happens that affairs have developed recently to change my plans."

She watched him with a calculating expression for a moment. "A girl friend?"

"You aren't by any chance, a detective?" he inquired.

"If I were," she laughed, "I migat not be out of work."

"I don't know," Peter observed. "The depression has hit everything."

"Don't I know it? Models in particular. Say, listen, Big Boy, when there's work enough to go half way around, this baby has more than she can do."

"I don't doubt it."

"But that isn't now." She tossed the stub of her cigarette into a tray and walked across the room to stand beside Peter. A heavy fragrance enveloped him, and some latent memory stirred. Unconsciously, he wondered where he had been surrounded by that same perfume before. Its pungent sweetness denied a cheap variety and seemed incongruous on a girl who was desperate for work. Of course, a girl like Sylvia Todd spent money extravagantly when she did have it and therefore was the more desperate when she did not, he concluded. She was saying in a confidential voice, "Tell you what I'll do, Mr. Anson. I'll work for half the regular pay, everything being on the down and down as it is. And if I were not hungry—you being on the bottom, yourself—I'd work for you for nothing," she added softly.

The word "hungry" startled Peter and touched that responsive chord in him that denied no creature his pity. "Is it as bad as that?" he demanded anxiously.

She nodded, her head lowered, and when she looked up again the blue eyes glistened with tears, like dew on blue violets. But she smiled wanly. "I walked out here all the way from seventy-fifth, so I could use my last dime for a sandwich to have strength to work on."

"But what made you think I would hire you?"

"I heard you were going to enter the exhibit, and had no model yet. Don't you think I would do?" wistfully.

"You might—if I needed a model," he said thoughtfully, as if he were considering something. Finally, "Tell you what I'll do—let me give you a dollar for some dinner and I'll think it over again. If I decide that I need you and can afford to pay you, I'll let you know tomorrow. That's the best I can do now."

"That's awfully sweet of you. But I think you would be positively goofy not to try for the scholarship, if that was your first idea. Don't give it up, please, and if you can use me, I'll make the price as low as possible. After all, one meal a day is better than none."

Won Drum Major Contest

Girl Says Spinning Baton Is A Dangerous Weapon

Even drum-majoring has its hazards, Dorothea (Dot) Slamin, of Waltham, Mass., warns.

Dot, who handled a baton for the first time four years ago, but who now holds five drum major championships, two of them national, discussed her art on her return from Chicago, where she won the National American Legion drum major contest.

The baton with which this eighteen-year-old girl has won her titles cost her $15. Regarding its use, she says:

"It has to be perfectly balanced so it will 'feel right' as you pass it from one hand to the other. You have to be careful of the steel ball at the end because when you get the stick spinning fast it is liable to become unbalanced and the ball will strike you in the face or the stomach."

The only ship that comes in for the man who waits is receivership.

Erect Sub-Arctic Mission

Work Of Two Priests At Repulse Bay Nearing Completion

Finishing touches are being given to a new mission of the Roman Catholic Church at Repulse Bay, lonely northern outpost, high up in the barren lands. Its construction is the work of Father Armande Chabeaut and Rev. Father Pierre Henry.

Lumber and material for the building were taken in this summer from Churchill, 800 miles to the south. The mission will be a welcome addition to this small settlement situated at the southern tip of Melville Island. Priests will minister principally to fur traders and nomadic bands of Eskimos who make frequent visits.

Repulse Bay nestles just south of the Height of Land. It was crossed and recrossed during the thrilling hunt for the lost MacAlpine party in 1929, and has been known to explorers since 1619. Visitors from the "outside" are not numerous.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

UPLAND PICTURE

That summer day the air was amber wine,
Each rocky hill stood drenched in ardent heat;
I, stumbling, saw a drowsy snake entwine
Its mottled coil and slither past my feet.
Half heard and half surmised, an elfin sound
Of sheep bells tinkled all the afternoon,
And, while the sun went blazing on his round,
From heaven there peered the wan ghost of the moon.
There was so little breeze it scarcely stirred
Grotesque mesquites' dust-covered, feathery grace;
There came no breath of flower, no song of bird
To break the strange enchantment of that place.
Far, far below the tawny river lay
Asleep, like all the land, that summer day.

Wild Ponies Wiped Out

Nearly Six Hundred Killed By Tropical Storm In Virginia

After surviving winds and storms for generations, the 500 or 600 wild ponies of Virginia were practically wiped out by the tropical storm which recently swept the region. Only three of their number are left. The ponies were descendants of the Arab stock that contrived to reach the shore when the vessel bringing them from Spain to America foundered off the Virginia coast over two centuries ago.

Joffre's Body Taken Home

The body of Marshal Joffre, who died January 3, 1931, has been taken from the invalides, at Paris, to his old home in Louveciennes for burial, as he wished, under his own chestnut trees. General Gouraud, one-armed war hero, and other soldier friends accompanied the casket to the home, where the widow, a daughter and the servants joined the funeral party and attended a religious ceremony.

Pets As Nuisances

In Milwaukee fines ranging from five to twenty-five dollars are imposed on owners of dogs which howl at night and disturb neighbors, and that seems fair enough. No one has any business keeping a pet which becomes a nuisance to others.

After all, there are some advantages in being a monkey. Nobody tries to make one out of him.

Little Helps For This Week

"Trust in the Lord and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed."—Psalm 37:3.

Build a little fence of trust
Around today;
Fill the space with loving work,
And therein stay;
Look not through the sheltering bars
Upon tomorrow,
God will help thee bear what comes,
Of joy or sorrow.
—Mary Frances Butts

Let us lift up our hearts and ask "Lord what wilt Thou have me to do?" Then light from the opened heaven will stream on our daily task, revealing the grains of gold in what yesterday seemed all dust, a hand shall sustain us and our daily burden, so that smiling at yesterday's fears we shall say "This is easy, this is light." Every lion in the way as we come up to it shall be seen chained, and the gates of the Palace Beautiful shall be open, and to us, feeble and fluctuating as we are, ministries shall be assigned and through our hands blessings shall be conveyed in which spirits of just men made perfect might delight."—Elizabeth Charles.

Flights Across Atlantic

To Be Made With Regularity Of Railroad Trains In Near Future

At a meeting in New York a dozen flyers, aeroplane designers and manufacturers, and representatives of American and European airlines discussed details of schedules for trans-Atlantic travel by air. On one point they all agreed—that by the end of 1934, or 1935 at the latest, seaplanes will be making scheduled flights across the Atlantic with the regularity of railroad trains.

Clarence D. Chamberlain, trans-Atlantic flyer, acted as chairman.

On these points too they agreed: That in two years at the most John Citizen may fly with perfect safety from New York to Paris in 20 hours for $350.

That he may send a letter from the United States to Europe by air at a maximum cost of 50 cents an ounce.

That air freight, including a long list of articles ranging from salesmen's samples to race horses, will pay the bills just as freight pays bills for the railroad.

Colony For Mentally Sick

Million Dollar Building For Defectives Opened In England

Sir E. Hilton Young, British Minister of Health, in opening a colony for mental defectives which was instituted by the Hertfordshire county council, at a cost of $1,250,000, said the people of the United Kingdom should not be content with the existence of mental deficiency to the degree that is the case in this country.

"For that reason," he continued, "we shall press ahead and search out ever possible means of social and scientific work by which we can reduce mental deficiency." He added, "I put in the forefront of the work of the state and the local authorities the prevention of this evil and the necessity of finding the means whereby it may be diminished."

Forward Passing New Rule For Amateur Hockey Player

The forward pass arrives in amateur hockey this season with its accompanying "power plays" or whatever you prefer to call net-ganging attacks. The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association's rules committee announced recently the regulations that will govern the new system in amateur ranks.

Forward passing is permitted in any one of the three zones, as in the National Hockey League, but as in the major circuit the puck-carrier must be the first attacker to enter the zone. The puck may be kicked in any zone but not into the goal.

Rules Near Same

The innovation to the amateur code brings professional and amateur hockey virtually the same standards as far as rules are concerned. The simon-pures will not be able to bodycheck so freely however, in the attacking zone. Defending players in their goal zone may bodycheck only the oncoming puck-carrier.

Here is how the C.A.H.A. rules committee describes development of the new style:

"Starting in the defending zone, the puck may be passed or kicked forward and taken inside the first blue line by any defending player.

"However, should the puck be passed or kicked over the blue lines any defending player who was in the defending zone when the puck crossed the blue line may skate up into the centre zone and play the puck.

Offside Called

"For violation of this rule (that is for a defending player in the centre zone to take a pass from the defending zone) an offside is to be called and the face-off is to be called at the point where the puck crossed the blue line.

"This brings play into the centre zone. In this area there is no offside, and the puck may be passed or kicked forward by attacking players up to the second blue line.

"When the attack reaches the second blue line either the puck or the puck carriers must be first over the line.

"That is to say, the player in possession may carry or kick it across the line or pass it laterally or forwardly into the third zone.

"When the puck or the puck-carrier cross the second blue line all the attacking players who were in the centre zone when the puck crossed the line may skate up and play the puck.

"The puck may be kicked across the second blue line or kicked by any player in the third zone.

"If an attacking player enters the third zone ahead of the puck or puck-carrier, play shall be stopped with a face-off at the blue line, should, however, an attacking player cross the blue line and the puck does not enter the third zone play shall continue without interruption.

"This brings play into the third or attacking zone and the puck carrier only may be bodied by the defending team.

" this zone (as in the other zones) there is no offside and the puck may be passed or kicked forward by the attacking players, but not kicked into the net. Special attention is called to the fact that only the attacking player in possession of the puck may be bodied by the defending team. And he must not be charged or cross-checked.

"Referees are instructed to watch this particularly and penalizes the attempts at rough play and illegal checking.

"The attacking players are not permitted to interfere in any way with the movements of a goal-keeper or his vision of the puck or the play. The penalty for violation is a face-off at the blue line. A goal scored under such conditions shall not be allowed. No other defending player but the goal-keeper is allowed to sit, kneel or fall on the puck within 10 feet of his own goal. Penalty, a face-off 10 feet directly in front of goal.

Must Be In Motion

"When an attacking player commits a foul in the defending zone the face-off shall take place at the blue line. If the defending team commits a foul the puck shall be faced where the foul occurs, except where otherwise specified, as in the preceding clause.

"The puck must at all times be kept in motion.

"The team in possession in the defending zone, may carry the puck behind the goal-line once, but after that shall always advance the puck unless prevented by opposing players.

"In the centre zone they may pass the puck back and forth, but must not pass or carry it back into the defending zone.

"The penalty is a face-off 10 feet in front of the goal of the offending team.

"On all face-offs every player must be on his own side of the puck and no players but those facing off can come within 10 feet of the puck.

"Attention is called to this rule because of the no-offside areas now in the game."

Gifts That Will Count—Tomorrow

FAN · CLOCK · TOASTER · WAFFLE · IRON · RADIO

In the month of December, fifty-four years ago, Thomas A. Edison gave his first public demonstration of lighting with incandescent lamps. Special trains were run to Menlo Park, New Jersey, to take care of the crowds which wanted to see this wonderful new light. No one man has ever given so wonderful a Christmas gift.

The Spirit of Christmas is Centered in the home, and now while you're pondering over gift problems, there are scores of Electrical Appliances in your dealer's showroom which are not only ornamental but will be just as useful many years from now as they are when given on Christmas morning. And they'll be the most popular gifts in the neighborhood on the morning after.

There is an Electrical Gift for the home to suit every purse and nearly every purpose from a Refrigerator, Range or Radio, to a variety of smaller appliances, any one of which your dealer will cheerfully demonstrate for you.
